

European Scouting
Photographs

Callum James Books

Welcome...

...to this latest catalogue from Callum James Books featuring 44 original photographs from the Scoutisme movement in continental Europe during the middle decades of the Twentieth Century. From about the 1940s to the 1960s there was a genre of photography that developed in France in particular in which scouts were photographed using somewhat 'heroic' conventions: strong poses, often from low viewing points emphasising the aspiration in a young man or boy to grow in strength and achievement.

There were numerous photographers working in France and other places in Europe in this style and their work had two main outlets. For the most part it was sold as illustrations for Scouting magazines and books and they contributed a lot not only to the image of Scouting but to its self-image; with the shadow of Nazi Germany and the Hitler Youth only just receding, Scouting in Europe took on a far less militaristic approach than its counterparts in America and Britain and this difference of emphasis is clear from these photographs. The other market for such images was in the form we have them here, a 9.25" x 7.5" print sold individually from catalogues or on request from the magazines in which they originally appeared.

Most of the biggest names of the genre are represented here and a few lesser known studios as well. This catalogue presents work by Jacques Simonot, Photo Dachs, Jos le Doaré, G. Ferney, Charles Egermeier, Robert Manson and Photos Junior-Flash. The photographs in this catalogue are grouped together by photographer and a list with further information and prices can be found on the last page. The penultimate page features scans of the numerous photographer's stamps found on the verso of the photographs.

Best wishes,

Callum
